

LIMPING BOY FINDS LORENZ, 58 FLOORS UP TOWER; GETS AID

Surgeon Went There for a Rest, but Plea of Parent Changes His Plan.

WERE LEAVING THE CITY

Had Come 600 Miles to See Him—Specialist Tired From Morning's Work.

Dr. Adolf Lorenz finished three operations to-day at 10:30 o'clock at St. Mark's Hospital and decided to call it a morning. He was tired and wanted to get away for a while from the importunities of numberless cripples and their relatives. He felt he needed a change. He wanted to do some sight-seeing. He had heard for years of the wonders of New York to be seen from the Woolworth Tower. There on the 58th floor overlooking the roofs of the city he thought he could gratify his need for a little rest, but—

As Dr. Lorenz was standing on the narrow balcony of the 58th floor of the Woolworth Tower, gazing over the tops of the buildings in lower New York toward the misty distances of Battery Bay, a man leading a small, limping boy by the hand touched him on the arm.

"Doctor," he began timidly, but Dr. Walter I. Galland, the Vienna surgeon's secretary, interrupted him. He recognized even on the 58th floor of the Woolworth Building a patient who wished to see the great Lorenz.

"Dr. Lorenz is very tired this morning," said Galland to the man. "He has come here to get a little rest. Can't you come to see him some other time?"

"But we can't stay another day," replied the man. "I've brought my little boy all the way from Youngstown, O., 600 miles from here, to see Dr. Lorenz. We came Sunday night, but there were so many ahead of us we have been unable to see him. We were told last to come back Saturday, but this morning I got a telegram saying my wife is very sick and we have to go back this afternoon. We were just waiting for our train and I decided to bring the boy up here to see the sights when I saw Dr. Lorenz. Can't he look at my child and tell me what to do. He has curvature of the spine."

Dr. Lorenz overheard him, and looking down, saw the child standing beside him.

"Ah, my little fellow," he exclaimed, stopping and taking the child's hands in his palm. "Come downstairs and we'll see what the trouble is."

The man was J. S. Scanlon and the boy was Jack, seven years old. They had been living since coming east at No. 28 Clifton Place, Jersey City.

Dr. Lorenz undressed Jack on the fifty-fourth floor and when the black and orange sweater and the green shirtwaist had been taken off he saw the lad's body encased in a steel and feather corset with a rest for the head. "Get the boy a lighter corset," he advised the father. "Continue the massage treatment and exercises and he will get all right."

He gave Jack a pat on the head, and descending in an elevator Dr. Lorenz continued his tour of the building. There is no rest for an "Ambassador of Mercy."

Dr. Lorenz's three operations this morning were for private patients of Dr. D. D. Ashley. He had no public engagements scheduled for the afternoon.

His decision of yesterday to return to Vienna because of the attacks made upon him by physicians in various cities was still in abeyance pending a meeting arranged for 2 o'clock by Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Commissioner of Health, with a representative group of orthopedic surgeons at his office to assure Dr. Lorenz he is welcome in this country. Dr. Lorenz, it was indicated, is awaiting the outcome of this meeting before he decides definitely whether he is to return or to continue his work in America with the co-operation of the members of his profession. Dr. Lorenz does not expect to attend the meeting.

FOCH FETED IN HOUSTON.
HOUSTON, Tex., Dec. 8.—Marshal Ferdinand Foch arrived in Houston late yesterday and was welcomed by a salute of nineteen guns. He then took part in a parade and last night attended a banquet in his honor.

FRUSH LOSES ON FOUL.
BUFFALO, Dec. 8.—Danny Frush lost in the third round on a foul to Herman Smith here last night. Frush saved himself from a knockout by his action, as he was on the verge of taking the count when he struck several low blows, for which he was disqualified.

MALONE IS WILLIN' AND IN FACT WANTS TO WED, BUT IS SHE?

MISS DORIS STEVENS
The friends of Dudley Field Malone, formerly Collector of the Port of New York and more lately candidate for Governor on the Farmer-Labor ticket, were still free to guess to-day as to whether he contemplated a second marriage before the end of the week.

Mr. Malone moved out of the Hotel Vanderbilt yesterday. At the hotel it was understood he had gone to Chicago. There were understairs rumors that he went away with luggage as for a wedding.

Miss Doris Stevens, daughter of H. H. Stevens of Omaha, whose family has for some time been interested in Mr. Malone's addresses to her, could not be found at her home here at No. 120 West 11th Street. Her parents quoted her last week as saying she hadn't "been able to make up her mind to marry Mr. Malone," but that if she did she would do it in a hurry "so she couldn't back out."

The stateroom on which Mr. Malone took an option on the Rotterdam for Antwerp and Boulogne, apparently with a canny view to the lady's state of mind, is still reserved.

About the only thing Mr. Malone did not deny before he left the Hotel Vanderbilt was that he was going to France Saturday to establish law offices in Paris.

200 DANCERS WATCH BROOKLYN DRY RAID

Federal Agents Seize $2,500 in Liquor in Rathskeller.

More than 200 dancers in Arcadia Hall, Halsey Street near Broadway, Brooklyn, early this morning watched Federal agents raid the rathskeller and cellar of the building and carry out liquor said to be worth $2,500.

Karl Kalmenson, who gave his occupation as salesman and his address as No. 725 Macon Street, was arrested by Federal Prohibition Enforcement Director Martin J. Kelly and taken to the Ralph Avenue Police Station. Later he was released under $500 bail pending his arraignment before a United States Commissioner in Brooklyn.

CONCERT TO BUILD INN FOR WAYFARING MEN

To Be Given in Brooklyn To-Day in the Academy.

For the benefit of the building fund of St. Christopher's Inn, at Graymoor-on-the-Hudson, the Irish Musical Society will give a concert to-night at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn. The inn is to replace the log hut built by Father Paul twelve years ago for the wayfarer without money or shelter.

The programme to-night includes the Philo-Keltic String Quartet; Mary Jordan, contralto; Ted Burke, tenor; Cordelia Lee, violinist; Edmund Burke, baritone; Marie Narelle, soprano, and Kathleen Narelle, pianist.

Father Francis P. Duffy is President, Victor Herbert, Vice President, Martin Conboy, Treasurer, and Edward J. Walsh of the society, Secretary. Because of the work Father Paul is doing, the Irish Musical Society has volunteered to help him, and its aim is to raise $10,000 necessary for his building fund.
